I was trying to prove the transitive closure of a relation using Coq's De Bruijn representation. The syntax I came up with is Inductive t : Type := | t_nil : t | t_rec : forall {m n l:nat} (f g:m n), t m -> t n -> t (f :: l). A simple enough example, but Coq tells me it doesn't have a suitable inductive type. I tried inlining the type definition so that the De Bruijn representation appears to work as expected. Inductive t : Type := | t_nil : t | t_rec : forall {m n l:nat} (f g:m n), t m -> t n -> t (f :: l). But in that case, it says Not a proof. How come this representation doesn't work? A: A type is represented in Coq using a combination of the types with no constructors: {A} and {A
